Dialogue

The object of a dialogue is not to analyze things, or win an argument, or to exchange opinions. Rather it is to suspend your opinions and to look at the opinions – to listen to everbody's opinions, to suspend them, and to see what all that means. If we can see what all of our opinions mean, then we are sharing a common content, even if we don't agree entirely. It may turn out that the opinions are not really very important – they are all assumptions. And if we can see them all, we may then move more creatively in a different direction. We can just simply share the appreciation of the meanings; and out of this whole thing, truth emerges unannounced – not that we have chosen it.

Vision Statement

It is the vision of the Oglala Lakota to courageously build healthy, prosperous communities with wisdom, kindness, generosity and respect for all life, land, water and air. The Oyate are empowered to lead the way to this sustainable future while honoring our culture and history through language and healing.
